Hey [REDACTED] I jumped the gun on the below update. [REDACTED] totally saw something I did not on the play back. [REDACTED] very familiar with the boats and I don't know how [REDACTED] does it but [REDACTED] often captures some unusual activity. [REDACTED] really scrutinizes the video and that's what it takes.

I think we got what we are looking for. [REDACTED] called me about 9 PM after [REDACTED] watched the play back. There was definitely unusual activity at the back of the Bayonne in the 4 AM hour. A mechanic totally shining his light around the back of the boat, let ok'ing over the railing and into the water. We have never seen that kind of activity/behavior before. At one point as [REDACTED] is shining the light on [REDACTED] water it does look like it's a tinge of bright green. The water is very dark as you know. The mechanic looks into the water multiple times going in and out of the boat.

I think [REDACTED] is going to email you about this. Let me know if you want me to send you a video clip.

Hi, [REDACTED] I don't know if you were able to log in and see the camera so I just wanted to give you an update.

While the Bayonne was at the barge yesterday, I did not see any dye. It stayed at the barge until about 3 pm or so and ran all night until 11:14 pm. At that time, it docked at Goldman for the night. Upon watching the playback, still no dye around the boat/dock and also no sign of anyone doing a proper pump out. It left the dock at 5:17 am. Looks like it will have the same route at yesterday, as it has been docked at the barge this afternoon.
